

Advocacy Services

If you are unable to work full-time due to an illness, injury, or medical condition and are under retirement age, Brown & Brown may be able to help you obtain Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI). Applying for SSDI can be a long and complicated process, and Brown & Brown's team of experienced advocates can assist eligible individuals every step of the way.

Considering SSDI?

If you are unable to work due to a disabling medical condition, SSDI benefits may be available to replace lost income on a temporary or permanent basis, allowing you to preserve your financial well-being.

Contact Brown & Brown for a no-cost consultation over the phone with our experienced Client Advocates who will:

- take time to fully understand your unique situation
- determine your SSDI eligibility
- explain the process of filing for SSDI
- answer any questions you may have
- onboard you as a client
- help you receive the benefits to which you are entitled

Social Security Disability representation

We support you through the entire application process, including:

- the initial application, appeals, and completing forms
- delivering regular claim status updates
- requesting and submitting medical records
- providing an experienced attorney to represent you at your disability hearing, if necessary

When you work with us

You have an experienced advocate to guide you through the complicated SSDI application process.

You receive support every step of the way, including navigating appeals and a court hearing, if needed.

You will be represented by an experienced disability attorney if your case goes to a hearing.

Access to our Client Success Center with the latest news and information about your claim on our client portal.

Services Beyond SSDI

Medicare advocacy

SSDI beneficiaries become eligible for Medicare after a waiting period. The licensed insurance agents at Aevo Insurance Services, a subsidiary of Brown & Brown, are available to help you navigate the complex world of Medicare and choose the plan that meets your unique healthcare and financial needs.
